🔬 GETINGE TOUR 🔬

The recent tour of the Getinge Experience Center by the SWE (Society of Women Engineers) members was an enriching and insightful experience. The visit offered a firsthand view of Getinge's cutting-edge work in producing sterilization equipment and operating room machinery, specifically aimed at enhancing hospital efficiency. This provided the SWE members with a comprehensive understanding of the company's contributions to the medical field and its impact on healthcare operations.

During the tour, the SWE members had the privilege of engaging with a panel comprising accomplished NJIT alumni who were also women in engineering. This part of the visit proved to be incredibly valuable as it provided a platform for these women engineers to share their professional journeys, experiences, and insights. The discussion likely encompassed various roles within the medical device industry, shedding light on potential career paths and opportunities for women in engineering.

paths and opportunities for women in engineering.

The opportunity to hear from fellow women engineers who have established themselves in the industry would have been inspiring and informative for the SWE members. Such interactions can offer valuable perspectives, guidance, and motivation, particularly in fields where women might be underrepresented, like engineering.

Overall, this experience at the Getinge Experience Center not only showcased the company's innovative work but also served as a platform for networking, learning, and gaining a deeper understanding of career possibilities for women in engineering within the medical device industry.
